

Paul Park, MD is presently Professor of Neurosurgery as well as the Director of the Spinal Surgery at the University of Tennessee Health Science Center and Semmes-Murphey Clinic. He was born in Los Angeles, CA and attended UCLA for college where he earned bachelor and master's degrees in biology. Dr Park subsequently obtained a MD degree from the University of Michigan and completed a neurosurgical residency at the University of Michigan. Dr Park completed an enfolded fellowship at the Cleveland Clinic Spine Institute as well as a post-residency fellowship in minimally invasive spinal surgery at the Semmes-Murphey Clinic. Until recently, Dr. Park was Professor of Neurosurgery as well as the Director of the Spine Program and Spine Fellowship Director at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor, where he practiced 17 years.

Dr. Park's research interests are varied, including basic research on disc degeneration and spine-related cancer as well as clinical investigations into spinal surgery techniques and outcomes. He has been the principal investigator or co-investigator of numerous clinical trials involving spinal infection, minimally invasive surgery, spinal deformity, and spinal cord injury, among others. Dr. Park has authored or co-authored several hundred peer-reviewed articles in addition to numerous book chapters and edited two texts on spinal surgery. Dr. Park is also a frequently invited speaker nationally and internationally at scientific meetings on spine-related topics. He is an active member of multiple neurosurgical and spinal societies serving on numerous committees. Dr. Park serves or has served on the editorial boards of various neurosurgical and spine journals.